We are pleased to announce the 11th Olympus Ireland Nurses' & Technicians' Training Course in GI Endoscopy

CARE & MAINTENANCE

With the increase in awareness of the risks of cross-infection through inadequately decontaminated medical equipment, the requirement for education and training of staff is vital in running an efficient endoscopy service.

Where instrumentation is complex, it is particularly important that those responsible for care and maintenance understand the basic principles of its construction and the possible consequences of not implementing both a thorough cleaning and disinfection routine and a frequent maintenance programme.

Flexible GI endoscopes are used in an ever-widening variety of diagnostic and therapeutic techniques. To the uninitiated, these instruments can be awkward to handle, with a bewildering array of accessories, so fully trained staff are essential to the smooth and cost-effective running of a modern endoscopy unit.

This intensive programme covers care, maintenance, cleaning and disinfection of GI endoscopes. Lectures on electrical hazards, future developments and the implications of endoscopic surgery are also included.

The Course Fee of €325.00* includes:

* (NB: A 10% discount will be offered for early payment of course fees - to be received by 6 September 2010)
